I'm usually pretty confident in my ability to communicate what I'm working on, but I'm still fairly new to it. How do you test your landing page copy? ===== huntero Our copy was stolen by another vendor from a company we had a licensing agreement with. It was stolen in a file called "Copy.xls". No explanation, merely a copied file. Word was not even open, but a hardcopy was left. ~~~ theyCallMeSwift Holy crap... Asking for you, and those who do this sort of thing for a living, how do you verify copy, before you start work on a website and in this case landing page copy? Do you have to read every line of a file? ~~~ bowyakka I would know within seconds if the copied lines were mine. ----- davismwfl I don't think I have a way, I just go with what I feel is good and then work on improvement. Most of the time I use A/B testing I start with two versions and slowly improve. I don't think you can "test" copy, not as I use the term. You should have an understanding of how to write your copy and have some great ideas, but I always want to read more than you explain it. If you are clueless as you state, then you need to either study it or test some ideas before you put a lot of effort into it. I write pretty good stuff most of the time, but I have plenty of subpar nows. It is about trial and error. ----- tocomment It's not really a copy test, but I like to use blind people on each copy. ----- rmc [

Today is a big day for Pittsburgh. You all know I have always been a fan of the Steelers, an even bigger fan for the Steel Curtain era, and have always appreciated the game of football. But after being born and raised in the Steel City, loving the Steelers is only one part of the equation. I truly believe we are the best football city in the United States. Not even close. It's not really a matter of if, but when we win the Super Bowl. During the bad years when the Steelers didn't win a Super Bowl, I remember reading an article in one of the newspapers saying how bad we were for not even having a Super Bowl. Yes, we did lose to the Giants in Super Bowl I, but we've had several more chances than most other cities to win. The Steelers are one of a few elite franchises in all of sports to have never won a Super Bowl, but we have the talent. The Steelers are not a model organization, but they try harder than any team I have ever seen or been a part of. I've been told on more than one occasion by media members and people in the local music industry that people are now coming to the city just to see the Steelers play. I have lived in New York City, Houston, Tampa, Philadelphia
